Friends in New Hampshire,

Come out to vote in the primary today. Even if you're unsure at this moment. High turnout will worry the GOP. Vote for someone who will make NH proud. Every vote counts.

Choose your spin: Bernie's gonna score two straight popular vote wins. Could be in position for a 3rd. And his two main opponents are largely unsuited for the coming states

Or

Bernie is not breaking 30% in either contest and there is little indication he's expanding his appeal

Sanders has lost over half his supporters from 2016. The only thing keeping him afloat ■ the sheer number of candidates ■ the mainstream Democratic lane - and that's about to change.

In a multi-candidate field, it would have been mathematically impossible for @BernieSanders to come close to his 21-point win of 2016. But there's no question tonight's margin is far smaller than his advisers expected. The Sanders turnout argument may merit a closer inspection.

It already is as bad as the Saturday night massacre. Nixon order 3 different people to fire the special prosecutor before the 4th finally did. We have 3 who resigned from the case in what appears to be protest of a corrupt DOJ acting on the president's behalf.

Trump is carrying out a multi-front attack on the rule of law: nymag.com/intelligencer/ ...

> The message sent by McCusker's punishment dovetails not only with the Friday Night Massacre, but other recent moves. The Department of Justice has opened an official process to allow Trump's personal attorney, Rudy Giuliani, the current target of an investigation, to take and sift through his Russian-financed dirt. (There is no such avenue available for lawyers representing other presidential candidates.) And after Trump floated a pardon for his Russia-scandal accomplice Roger Stone, who is being charged with obstructing an investigation in order to protect Trump, the Justice Department has proposed reducing his sentence.
> Trump is making it perfectly clear throughout the federal government. Anybody who stands in his way will be punished, even if they are on the side of the law. And his allies will be protected, even if they violate it.

I'm usually a "defeat them on Election Day" guy but we are approaching a level of overt and unapologetic corruption that there needs to be some combination of a mass bureaucratic mutiny and monumental,organized public demonstrations across the country. This is level 11 dangerous various forms of single payer lite are more common than is generally conceded. the German system, for example, has highly regulated non profit insurers and mandatory doctor participation in a form of "doctors councils", which divides the proceeds. it avoids all our craziness...

Kravis' withdrawal notice, unlike Zelenski's, specifies he's resigned from DOJ. He put his career & livelihood on the line. Prosecutors don't do that lightly. Here, it's being done to say the rule of law is being trampled by Trump & Barr.

Alexandra @nycbubbles · 14m
It isn't just single payer lite, they are fully different systems from multi-payer to hybrid systems to ones similar to the ACA. Hell, even Canada still relies almost 30% on private/supplemental insurance. M4A is the outlier, not the norm.

What happened? YOUR Justice Department closed the case because, unlike your pal Roger Stone, my brother didn't lie to Congress, intimidate a witness, and obstruct a federal investigation.

> Donald J. Trump ✓ @realDonaldTrump
> Whatever happened to Hillary campaign manager Podesta's BROTHER? Wasn't he caught, forced to leave his firm, with BIG BAD things to happen? Why did nothing ever happen to him, only to the "other" side?

The culinary workers won't lose insurance, Neera. How many different ways do we need to explain this to you?

Not to mention the fact that some people have NO insurance. Why don't you care about them?

Such a great thread. We've had politics for a long time and we haven't had harassment campaigns of unions or parties or advocacy organizations that have different policy interests.

But then most people understand politics is about addition, not subtraction.

Argüello-Kline participated in a '16 hit against Bernie in the run up to NV.

She told ThinkProgress, CAP's defunct news outlet, that Bernie staff posed as Culinary workers ▮ snuck into hotels to influence union members.

Neera & Podesta gleefully discuss it in this leaked email.

She was on an advisory board for our proposal on a federal jobs guarantee, a proposal Senator Sanders supports and campaigns on. The advisory board had union leaders and experts. She's not on our CAP board.

Spreading lies is how you alienate people.

It replaces it with better healthcare that they won't lose if they lose their jobs, but you know that as well.

But the union's point is the wage won. They likely have low copays and would have to pay a new tax under M4A; they've gotten better health care in lieu of wages. So many would not be better off. I assume you know this and just aren't calling a union wrong Bc of knee jerk support

Their taxes won't be going up more than their premiums go down unless they're very well off and that's at best a tiny fraction of their membership.

People get sick and lose their jobs 🔳 the time. What do you think happens to that «great» insurance then ?

5 2 113

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 55m
You have no idea if that's true because Senator Sanders hasn't told us how he'd pay for it or how much it costs. For all we know they'd have higher taxes than premiums, especially since there are no cost controls in the bill. You've made stunning assertions out of thin air

Oh please you know that dog don't hunt - Elizabeth has done the math for him.

This is just pathetic. I hope you're being well compensated and that you never get to learn what it's like to be sick or have a sick family member with shitty insurance.

Uhhh her plan isn't his plan, as he will readily tell you. She doesn't raise middle class taxes, he does. It's kind of amazing that you'd attack a union for not knowing what its talking about on health care given what you've said here.

People like this are so disingenuous.

It's not bad enough that she spreads lies, she accuses others of doing that by falsely attributing things to them that they didn't say.

These people are ruining our ability to have civil discourse with constant bad faith arguments. twitter.com/neeratanden/st…

But the union's point is the wage won. They likely have low copays and would have to pay a new tax under M4A; they've gotten better health care in lieu of wages. So many would not be better off. I assume you know this and just aren't calling a union wrong Bc of knee jerk support

Their taxes won't be going up more than their premiums go down unless they're very well off and that's at best a tiny fraction of their membership.

An incredible amount of young voters turned out to support Dems. If a candidate is capturing 51% of the young voters in states, that candidate can excite the base necessary to defeat the GOP. In NH the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th place combined couldn't defeat Bernie's % of young voters.

I'm saying they're a bloc that is not incredibly reliable in the general, that would come out more likely IF the candidate they're overwhelmingly backing in the primaries is nominated. We have data showing that the other 75% of age demographics more reliably vote.

What if older people who reliably vote don't like Sanders and will either not vote or vote for Trump. By this logic, because we know they will vote and have been voting against Bernie in votes so far, we should avoid this greater risk.

yeah except he's not "my candidate" and also they're making the same charge against Warren's plan. Objectively, if you're basing your vote on a fear that Sanders or Warren are going to ban your health insurance, you should base your vote on something else.

1) humane foreign policy, 2) inspiring young progressives to get into politics, 3) helping organize a diverse working class into taking political and economic power, 4) appointing the right kind of people to his cabinet are a few of the other options!

Additionally, a legitimate advocacy for Medicare for All, even if it doesn't happen immediately, increases the likelihood for passing better healthcare related policy. It also speeds up the timeline for moving toward a single payer system.

Just thought if you're asking a candidate what she or he thinks about a situation where one candidate has a plurality of pledged delegates, that candidate's past position on super delegates overturning the will of the Majority of delegates might be a helpful reference point.

This fight is designed for when Bernie fails to get the nomination, make his supporters so angry to vote 3rd party or Trump again. Trump & troll army are fueling it.

There's a logical inconsistency to thinking the will of a plurality of pledged delegates should win out but the will of a majority of delegates can be overturned.

A runoff primary (think Super Tuesday redux) is clearly the right answer.

Have the top two candidates go before the voters if there is no one at the delegate threshold.

Runoff primaries, spread the word

Neera, nobody would be carefully laying this groundwork for overturning the candidate with the most votes if it looked like Biden, Pete, or Klobuchar was going to get the plurality.

We all know it, we see what you are doing.

100%. Never let Kelly paper over his role in enabling some of the Trump admin's worst cruelty - like family separation.

The point is to have candidates make a committment ahead of time to what they think the fair principle is this time around. (The rules have, obviously, changed quite a bit since 2016).

Just thought if you're asking a candidate what she or he thinks about a situation where one candidate has a plurality of pledged delegates, that candidate's past position on super delegates overturning the will of the Majority of delegates might be a helpful reference point.

Clinton didn't just have the most delegates, she had a majority of them—proportionally allocated because of handily winning a majority of Democratic primary votes.

That's why I was able to go from a Bernie supporter to a Clinton voter in 2016. Like it or not, Clinton won the majority of delegates, states, and votes. That won't happen in 2020.

The resolution constraining Trump's warmaking authority just passed the Senate,55-45, with 8 Republicans voting with Democrats! And Tom Cotton's amendment gutting it was defeated, as a special bonus. Here's the full backstory:

Cannot say this enough. Barr's comments are intended to tamp down on discontent within DOJ & give him some cover, and they were undoubtedly sold to Trump, who knows he's far more effective with Barr than he was with Sessions, on that basis.

It's not random Twitter people, Bernie's actual paid staff routinely harass journalists, organizations and regular citizens online. He's seldom publicly reprimanded or removed anyone for this behavior. This statement is empty

> Gary Grumbach @GaryGrumbach
> Just now in interview with @NewsHour, Sen. @BernieSanders floated the idea that those online who are reportedly harassing Culinary Union members for not supporting Sanders are not actually Sanders supporters. "Sometimes people attack people in somebody else's name," Sanders said.

It's apparently a lot more controversial than I thought to point out that Bernie Sanders doesn't have special powers to pass Medicare for All in a Congress where roughly 70 Dem House members and about a dozen Dem Senators support Medicare for All.

Neera is being dishonest, everyone knows Bernie has always compromised. After pushing for the public option Bernie/Clyburn secured free heath clinics in the ACA. Ironically Neera was one of the Dems to seek to water down the bill after Scott Brown got elected. But Pelosi said no.

Starting from a compromise is best?

This is why more and more people can't stand centrists. Your capitulation to the right by starting in the middle pulls us further to the right year after year.

From what I understand his plan is to pass it through reconciliation. But if you can't recognize that planning to pass Not-M4A, and then go for a second bill during a traditionally weak point in a presidency is a compromise on passing M4A, I'm not sure what else to tell you.

The House PASSED a Public Option. It was killed in the Senate by Lieberman. Then Kennedy died & a Republican won his seat. Since the Senate version w/out the PO had passed before Kennedy died, the Dems had no choice but to go with that. That's not a "failure of negotiation".

Someone should do an analysis of favorability/unfavorability of Trump and all the major Dems in the battleground states. Dems should worry about high unfavorables already. That would tell you a lot about the potential fall campaign which would likely only worsen.

We can look at polls. Or we can look at results so far. Sanders got 46% of all Dems last time. All those people should be open to voting for him again. May want to ask yourself why they haven't so far. That can change but it would take real outreach

The most interesting part of this is the fact that she has a Freudian slip and almost says President Biden.

Ian Sams @IanSams
Missed it earlier, but this is a smart video by team Biden. Republicans' obsession with taking him down a peg, so inartfully admitted by Ernst, only serves to remind Iowans that they really are concerned he may beat them. Valuable currency in this primary.

Our Goals & Strategy

Our hope is that the goal of a potential HRC campaign and the DNC would be one-in-the-same: to make whomever the Republicans nominate unpalatable to a majority of the electorate. We have outlined three strategies to obtain our goal:

1) Force all Republican candidates to lock themselves into extreme conservative positions that will hurt them in a general election;

2) Undermine any credibility/trust Republican presidential candidates have to make inroads to our coalition of independents;

3) Muddy the waters on any potential attack lodged against HRC.

Operationalizing the Strategy

Pied Piper Candidates

There are two ways to approach the strategies mentioned above. The first is to use the field as a whole to inflict damage on itself similar to what happened to Mitt Romney in 2012. The variety of candidates is a positive here, and many of the lesser known can serve as a cudgel to move the more established candidates further to the right. In this scenario, we don't want to marginalize the more extreme candidates, but make them more "Pied Piper" candidates who actually represent the mainstream of the Republican Party. Pied Piper candidates include, but aren't limited to:

Also I think a corollary of this is treating politics as a game between elites w/o considering the real problems of people that politics is intended to address. That politics as elite game frame both informs this "neutral" view & is a product of it.

It's worse than that. Trump is clearly a criminal and a danger to our nation. Every sentence about him should start with this assertion. It's like talking about Jeffrey Dahmer's views on the environment and not mentioning he's a serial killer.

Either the kind of check they were elected to provide, or a political miscalculation

THIS HOUSE DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY was built in places like Richmond, Va., Salt Lake City and Charleston, S.C. It was in these traditional Republican strongholds that voters who put DONALD TRUMP in the White House decided they would also send a Democrat to Washington to represent them after a campaign that was dominated by a mix of kitchen-table issues, dashed with promises to keep an unusual White House in check.

AND NOW, NEARLY ALL OF THOSE freshmen -- Speaker NANCY PELOSI'S majority makers -- will vote to remove the president from office, which can be viewed as either the type of bold behavior for which they were sent to Washington, or a career-ending

I go the opposite direction. Hold journalists and reporters' feet to the fire. They're failing us right now. It's time for them to step up or make way for people who will. The First Amendment is both a privilege and a burden. It provides protection, but it also imposes a duty.

This is totally uncalled for.
Many of us have been harsh critics of Pelosi. It wasn't pathetic. She was too cautious for too long. But now that she's in the fight, she's ferocious and relentless and I'm with her 100%.

HarleyJane @HarleyjaneD · 15 Nov 2019
She was not too cautious and has been ferocious and relentless - she just did it quietly. For those instant gratification freaks, she disappointed. For those who had patience, she knew that trump would impeach himself.

NH law permits the Secretary of State to change the date of the primary so that it comes before any other primary. So if Iowa becomes a primary, NH will change its own primary earlier. And Iowa doesn't want to be the second primary, even to allow full voter participation.

Is literally in the article.

iden starts by relating the story of how his on died despite having access to quality ealthcare via quality insurance. "Healthcare ersonal to me," Biden says in the ad, over a appy soundtrack and imagery of him looking aguely prayerful, standing in front of a flag, nd being patted on the back by Barack)bama. "Obamacare is personal to me. And /hen I see the president try to tear it down nd others propose to replace it and start ver, that's personal to me, too. I was just perplexed that you said you wouldn't credential Breitbart after you gave them exclusive interviews with the last candidate you worked for. Is your point that you thought Breitbart met your standards of a "news outlet" in February of 2016 but no longer does?

Problems with waiting to the next administration is:
A) that kicks the can into 2021 and supply chains may already have started moving out of China due to uncertainty (and Trump might yet win)
C) Trump loses, but a popular Dem wins who wants to strike an even tougher deal

I feel the same way about you! But I believe it's dangerous to encourage someone who has behaved so despicably. If this were Kasich or Haley, I'd hold my nose. Joe Walsh will play no role in saving the soul of this country. He'll only enrich and elevate himself.

I think Joe Walsh is grossly wrong. I'm not planning to support him in a million years. But there's this:

> Nate Silver @NateSilver538
> Given that a primary challenge to Trump is very unlikely to actually succeed, having someone who's more bombastic / skilled at drawing media attention (say, Joe Walsh) probably causes more problems for Trump than a patrician, moderate Republican would (say, Bill Weld).

The WA caucus in 2016 was the most chaotic, least democratic process I've ever participated in and from what I gather, Nevada was far worse. I will never understand why more states won't switch to primaries.

My recommendation: make the Iowa Caucus a primary. The primaries are far more democratic, more inclusive of working people and people of color. It's really kind of shocking that the first contest would continue to be a caucus and if a virtual caucus can be hacked, end them.

I mean this is just inaccurate. 90% of Dem victory in 2018 was from people who voted for Trump in 2016. This is what started this all off. Acting like there is no swing is a strategy for losing a general election. Plain and simple.

I think you misjudge why the swing exists. It's not because people are in the middle politically. It's because people despise both parties equally and feel neither represents their interests. Trump pulled voters on populism and being outside of the system, not on centrist policy.

I want to stress that my challenge on the data claim is the conclusion - that "courting" moderate voters was the cause of the vote switch. It's my view that Donald Trump was the cause of the vote switch and there is no citation to evidence as to why there was a vote switch.

> G. Elliott Morris @gelliottmorris
> We have direct evidence that the vast majority — nearly 90% — of Democrats' gains from 2016 to 2018 came from vote-switching not turnout. It may be true that moderate candidates underperformed expectations, but courting moderate voters is clearly key to victory. twitter.com/jerry_jtaylor/…

That's an estimate of course. Really an after election poll. I don't think that's true myself based on other analysis of the sane data. This is not hard science. Polling is not hard science

Just read it. The #1 finding is huge increase in turnout relative to 2014, the last mid-term. Yes, there were large # of 2016-2018 switchers, but that's his point #5. In his judgement, key was getting typical non-midterm voters out. Am i missing something (always possible)?

1) Call the Dem nominee "Socialist"
2) Devote 100% of his time going negative to drive up the Dem nominee's negatives
So, let's not dictate our decisions based on Trump since we can't control what he does anyway.

Trump is also now on a campaign to discredit all polls, so that, as in 2016, when the polls show Trump losing 2020, Putin will cheat again to ensure a Trump win, and they'll say polls are always wrong. They are telling Trump supporters to lie to pollsters for this very reason

3 9 24

Larry Sabato @LarrySabato · 18 Aug 2019
Enough polls, especially in battleground states, were indeed misleading in 2016, so the poll critique seems credible. Some people do lie to pollsters, but at least until now, lying hasn't been enough to torpedo polling. More likely, people will refuse to participate, not lie.

I landed at 2pm. I just got out of LaGuardia at 3pm because there is only one lane to exit at Terminal C. If you can avoid LGA, avoid it. It's not worth it.

Of the presidential candidates who could switch to Senate, Hickenlooper is the least appealing. There's a strong field already, he's out of step w/ party, he clearly doesn't want to be a senator, and six years since last election ■ a long time, in a rapidly-changing state. twitter.com/davidsirota/st…

I think there are several candidates-- Romanoff, Baer, Madden, don't know others--who would have as strong ■ chance against Gardner as Hickenlooper. "Popular former governor" isn't ■ profile w/ a great track record. Bullock, though, is probably the only one who could beat Daines

I have ■ political theory I call, "They didn't marry you." That is, political analysts tend to overestimate the bond between voters and politicians, when all the voters did was a half-second act of checking a ballot. And then some move away, others move in, and people forget.

Anyway, the "Trump's magical insult powers will beat us" is a Democratic worry that can transfer to Warren (DNA!) or Sanders (socialism!) or Biden (old!). Cable news makes conservative viewers confident and it makes liberals scared.

I actually think Dem voters are going through a relatively nuanced analysis to see what sticks and what does not. The fact that his attacks on Biden seem to fall flat so far has actually helped Biden with voters. That may change but it's not like all names are the same.

This is very dumb.

Those Republican attacks occurred in a Republican primary. But Republicans are super racist and (at least) fascist-curious, so the attacks didn't work in the GOP primary.

But in the general, Trump got 3 million fewer votes even with help from Russia/FBI/NYT

But on second thought, keep doing what you're doing. Because the supporters of a candidate who is at 20% should definitely attack people constantly and alienate as many as possible. It's a brilliant strategy for winning a majority.

If Trump loses TX he loses the W/H.

In front of ours AG lied to us about the Mueller report in order to protect his boss, Trump. He was in charge of Epstein's care. And we're just supposed to trust him on this as news breaks that Mar-a-Lago was a site for trafficking? We need a full investigation. Now.

The real issue at hand is that it is utterly foolish to argue to the death over two perfectly reasonable options, any of which would be a massive improvement over what we have now.

Especially when the opposing party is proposing slashing Medicare and burning the world down.

Per new Monmouth poll, Medicare for America has most support amongst Dems in Iowa. We can have universal coverage and allow choice for people. This isn't about what naysayers want. This is what Dems want.

	Aug. 2019
A. Get rid of all private insurance coverage in favor of ... Medicare for All	21%
B. Allow people to either opt into Medicare or keep their private coverage	56%
C. Keep health insurance private for people under age 65 but regulate the costs	13%
D. Keep the health insurance system basically as it is	4%

Among non-college whites, Trump's hardcore support is among evangelicals. Non-evangelicals are more evenly divided. This is too often forgotten.

This is exactly right. The Democratic coalition today is suburban and urban. It is people of color, young people, lots of college educated whites. And non college white women moved to the Dems in 2018. Important to understand it is all of this.

It's interesting to see that the lesson the left has taken from right wing media bullying is that there isn't enough left wing media bullying. If we're being attacked on both sides we must be doing something right

> Neera Tanden @neeratanden
> What makes Trump happy is the ability to attack the press in the morning, and then precisely because of his bullying, they accept his narrative that he's fighting racism. Nothing makes him happier. Indeed, he wants media that kowtow to him to flourish.

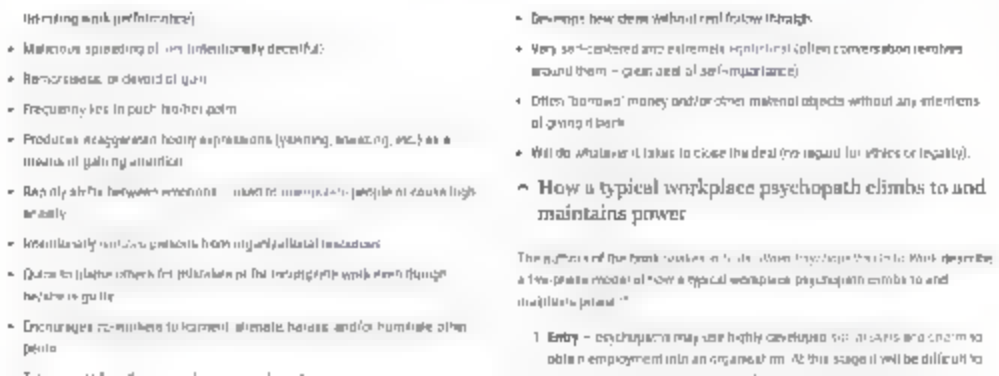
It's past time for the MSM to give a name to who and what Trump is. Far too many believe that psychopaths are all murderers, they aren't. Some are what are called "Snakes in Suits."
That's what needs to happen. Define the problem, explain the problem, then do something to fix it.



- Develops new ideas without real follow through
- Very self-centered and extremely egotistical (often conversation revolves around them – great deal of self-importance)
- Often "borrows" money and/or other material objects without any intentions of giving it back
- Will do whatever it takes to close the deal (no regard for ethics or legality).

How a typical workplace psychopath climbs to and maintains power

1. Entry – psychopaths may use highly developed social skills and charm to obtain employment into an organization. At this stage it will be difficult to

New Zealand pass gun safety laws in a week. A House passed bill is ready for the Senate to take it up. It's the choice of GOP Senators not to. A choice each of them make.

Why they don't reject the NRA in its current failing state is telling. They'd rather buy Lapierre Rodeo Drive finery than face the truth. The biggest Trump-era surprise to me? Complete lack of American leadership in the GOP Senate post McCain.

Strong gun control measures are an absolute must, but we have to look at the bigger picture too. The real damage from these shootings is the fear they inflict on the hundred million people who hear about them, who are actually quite safe. That is damage that we can prevent now.

It's weird to suggest that the tone of the debates in 2007 had anything at all to do with how the general election turned out in 2008. I doubt too many voters were thinking about primary debates when the economy was in free fall.

I don't buy it, I'm sorry. The GOP got torched in the 2006 midterms. Bush was already unpopular. They were in a hole and then the economy cratered and turned a close-ish Dem-favoring election into a rout. I don't recall anyone in Iowa in '08 discussing primary debates.

Dan @DaytimeDan · 1 Aug 2019
The reason '08 debates were so heated is that it was a nomination worth having. Bush's approvals completely collapsed after Katrina & never recovered, certainly not as the housing market began to crater. The fundamentals drove 2018 victory & Obama ran up the score with his skill.

Thanks for pointing to the 2008 debate highlights and making my case. In 2007, the debates were much more about Bush and far less negative- they got heated in the late fall and we had 23 of them over all. Managed each one for Hillary and I remember them well.

It's weird to suggest that the tone of the debates in 2007 had anything at all to do with how the general election turned out in 2008. I doubt too many voters were thinking about primary debates when the economy was in free fall.

we lost the house, the senate and thousands of seats in state legislatures around the country during his eight years in office. ■ healthy political party should be able to look at that and ask what went wrong.

Puzzled by the idea that the candidates in a primary debate should spend more time talking about Trump. We already know all these candidates oppose Trump; that is not what differentiates them from each other. I want to know what they would each do as President.

The idea is to use the Dem primary debates to build the case against Trump/GOP to the country. Most of the debates did this in 2007 and helped secure a victory in 2008 for the nominee. We can talk to the country and ourselves, not just ourselves.

A takeaway from #DemDebate Night 2: Repubs spent generation arguing who was more fit to continue Reagan's legacy. Less than 4 years after Obama left office, Dem 2020'ers are throwing his legacy overboard - starting w/ his singular historic achievement (ACA) =>>

I'll tell you something else we expect. Common sense, stability, sensibility. I turned the debate off cause I was tired of the yelling. Warren did it too. Dems don't need bluster or "breakout moments", it's why I wrote of Harris completely. We need a leader,not a ratings catcher.

That is a really impressive non sequitur.
I actually don't think this is that difficult to understand. Obama dropped the ball. Trump administration hasn't. We had an election ('18) w/ huge security successes. There is nothing in the Dem bill addressing that ongoing threat

This thread started out with a column about McConnell's actions to stall election security. So it's not a non sequitor. And it's completely false that the election security bills wouldn't address the concerns in the report issued by McConnell's friend Burr from Sen Intel

This is a case of how better regulation at the front end would have saved the industry money. Capitalism needs strong rules.

Yes, we need strong rules as guardrails for capitalism. Would we not enforce traffic safety laws to keep everyone safe and trouble free?

What really drives me insane is that there is a knee jerk belief that deregulation--in and of itself--is automatically ■ good thing. Not so.

Well, that is assuming the House/HJC is really "moving to impeachment inquiry". It is going to take more than just a couple of words inserted by Doug Letter in an "In Re:" petition.

The 2018 cycle had the most GOP retirements since 2008, and the fewest for Democrats since that same year. It'll be interesting to see where 2020 ends up, because mostly what's left now are hardcore Trumpers and the GOPers who didn't bail in 2018.

My opinion is that a good impeachment inquiry followed by a house referral to the senate. Where the senate unjustly refuses to hold him accountable and leaves him in office to stand for election, might be the best outcome.

If the Senate votes to acquit or McConnell blocks the trial the public, which already believes Trump to be guilty of a lot of things even if they don't necessarily support impeachment now, could well judge them harshly, again, before Senate elections next year.

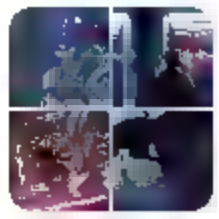
Into the Spiderverse was fantastic. If you haven't see it, you're missing out.



sylvia @songofjon
into the spiderverse is the lowest grossing spiderman movie of all time despite being a visual masterpiece with a better understanding of comic books action than any other movie before. you all have no taste and don't deserve this movie.

Now I want to hear the Left lecture about how "we are better than this" and how morality, values and policy will sway voters, etc.

It won't. Accept it, specially to win EC & Senate.

Was at ■ fancy DC cocktail party last night, and struck by the elite certitude that Bernie Sanders would not quit the primary even if he was losing every state. I don't think this ■ true, and it would only be concievable if the race narrowed down to Sanders/Biden.
